WOMAN.

The following beautiful lines in praise of WOMAN, a theme which has tasked the finest intellectual talents in every age...

TO THE PUBLIC.

The recent chastisement inflicted upon Thos. A. Terry, Junior Editor of the Danville Reporter, has led to such gross misrepresentation...

My brother did not deign to notice this scurrilous production through the public papers, designing to inflict the necessary personal chastisement...

"We find in the Lynchburg Virginian of 28th instant, a communication over the signature of William Smith, in relation to an article that appeared in this paper some weeks since...

"This conscientious mail contractor, as he would have the public believe, says, in his communication to the Virginian, that he has long since forfeited his contract on the Danville line...

"We feel the consequences of his neglect of self-imposed duties, and although he has rid himself of his contract he has not placed himself beyond the reach of the censure of an indignant public."

"In his communication the rascal actually counts about religious obligations and the meek and lowly spirit of the blessed Saviour, and all that sort of thing."

"Extra Billy seems to think because he has been honored by the people of his district by a seat in the Senate of Virginia, it is sufficient evidence of his worth and integrity."

"The foregoing are copies of the original articles introduced as evidence during the examination of James M. Smith and Marcellus Bell at the suit of the Commonwealth, and which articles now remain filed among the papers of the said cause."

Sept. 1836. Wm. Rison, D. C. Let it be recollected that these most base and infamous calumnies were uttered by entire strangers, without any just provocation, and against my eldest and dearly beloved brother—a brother I know to be honorable and just, though in difficulties—a brother with a wife and eight children—all future time. Was I wrong? I appeal to every honorable man, was I wrong?

Having business with Peck, Wellford & Co. which necessarily took me to Danville, I determined to embrace that opportunity to effect my purposes. Accordingly armed myself with a cane and a cowhide for T. A. Terry, and with more deadly weapons for emergencies.

"The public will perceive that the affair with Terry was an ordinary affray—that the firing by which one person was slightly wounded, was a distinct transaction, and was purely an act of self-defense."

My conduct as a Mail Contractor having given rise to much animadversion and much unjust criticism, in the Lynchburg and Danville Whig papers, and having dissolved my relations as such with those communities, I deem it right to submit a few remarks to enlighten the public mind...

if not more, it could not be got across at all by any exertion—on two occasions the mail was thus delayed three trips together.

"This would have been a complete vindication against the complaints made to the Post Master General, if it had been forwarded; but I lived a long distance from the line—could not give it my personal attention, and my agent, who spared no exertions to get the Mail along, neglected to forward me the evidence which would have accounted for the failures, and the Post Master General first fined, and then annulled the contract, right fully as the case stood before him; but wrongfully in fact, as the above certificate most clearly proves."

"The 2d charge is, that my object was to break up the Piedmont line. It is not true. I let Peck, Wellford & Co. have a part of the Danville line to neutralize them as much as possible—that they might let the traveller take his own course."

"The articles in the Danville Reporter are not entitled to notice here, but for the grave consequences which have resulted from them; and here now, will I only say, that they are a tissue of the foulest falsehood against private character, which ever sprung from a licentious press."
